Jingo.

Said Farmer Jones to Farmer Brown, "What ails this pesky nation? It seems to me we're backin' down afore the hull creation. Drot this diplomatic lingo, We need a man, by jingo!"

"We need a man whose fightin' bump Holds ginger, grit, and sass. To tell John Bull to get a hump An' jest keep off our grass. Then let the Mugwumps go to Bingo, We want a man, by jingo!"

"A chap, whose backbone, like the oak, Is bent by 'nary gale. Who'd jest as lief give Spain a soak As twist the lion's tail: Who ain't no sneakin' dingo, But a fast rate man, by jingo!"

"Tain't no wrong to guard your own, That's what we're put on earth fur; You bet each dog protects his bone. An' that's his right of birth, sir. I'm sick o' all this lingo, Give me a man, by jingo!"

"I'll bet them chaps across the sea Are laughin' in their boots, While Cuba's tryin' to get free. An' we sot still, like brutes. Spin bid us go to Bingo; Oh, for a man, a man, by jingo!"

"Give us a chap who's brave and strong, Sets both feet square upon the ground, Upholds the right, strikes down the wrong. Cud lick the world in just one round. For him I'll let the swing go; He gets my vote, by jingo!"

We have now been holding meetings in our tent at Des Arc nearly three weeks. The weather has been fine for this time of the year, the attendance good, and with a very little exception the order has been excellent. We held our first Sabbath meeting yesterday. Nearly all present took part and felt that it was good to be there. We expect to be back at Ironton ere long. I see that L. M. Wagner is out last week with another article.

I also am very busy, but when he shall write anything worthy of reply will try to find time to follow up, as I have done in the past. His last article looks a little like begging an excuse for not answering my questions, which he said he started out to do. Press on, Bro. W. I. Don't be discouraged. Remember the Catholics offer one thousand dollars for just the evidence that you have promised to give. As there is nothing new in the last article, I will simply draw a contrast. Mr. W.'s position in his last, as in previous articles, is that Jesus kept the law that we might be freed from keeping it. Paul's position is that God sent his son, "That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us." Rom. 8:3-4. Wagner's plan is to save men in sin. The gospel plan is to save them from sin. (The transgression of the law.) 1 Jno. 3:4. The gospel plan is, by the love of God bestowed upon the sinner, to win him back to God and the original likeness of God in which he was first created, for, "We know," says John, "that when he shall appear, we shall be like him." 1 Jno. 3:1-2. If Jesus kept the commandments, how can we be made like him by breaking them? which seems to be the plan of Eld. W.

Again, Bro. Wagner's plan is to change and bend the law to make it harmonize with the sinner. God's plan is to change the sinner so that he is in harmony with the law. Hear what God says in Ezek., 36:26-27: "A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the strong heart out of your flesh. And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them."

We would say to the reader, choose which plan you will accept. Which plan will stand the test of the judgment?

Yesterday's Earthquake.

The experience of a live and active earthquake shock is new to Kansas City. Mother Earth having reposed in quiet and peaceful inactivity in this favored region for many years. The quake was not great enough to do any damage to life and property. A few persons who rushed out into the chill morning air clad only in robes de nuit may have caught cold, but beyond such contingencies and the shaking up of the nervous systems of the frightened ones, the sum total of the earthquake's effect was a volume of gossip on the streets and about town.

Reports from all over the country indicate that this quivering of the bosom of the earth extended from Michigan to Louisiana and from Kansas to Ohio. No serious damage was anywhere done. The surface of the land simply shook a trifle and relapsed into quietude and stability again.

For the past ten or fifteen months, however, the earth has been bothered about something, judging from the agitated condition of its surface. Along the western slope of the Mexican ranges of mountains shocks have been intermittently occurring during that period. Similar shakings have alarmed the populations of the western slopes of the Andes in South America. Then a great tidal wave came out of the sea and destroyed the town of La Paz, in Lower California.

Yesterday the whole Mississippi valley was shaken, and the people are apt to begin to wonder where the earth will quiver next.

Should these disturbances prove to be premonitory symptoms of a local internal earthy disorder of serious type, then people have reason to view with alarm a recurrence of them. The earth is usually a quiet, unobtrusive sort of an affair, of retiring disposition and inoffensive manners and customs. When once aroused, however, puny man has reason to be afraid. Too many terrible examples of the awful destruction of life and property are remembered for people to contemplate with content and satisfaction the probability of seismic disturbances.

The historical earthquake and the resulting tidal wave which engulfed Lisbon in 1755, sweeping awful destruction of life and property before it, the more recent wrecking of Charleston, S. C., the great earthquake of May, 1877, which destroyed so many South American cities, the stories of islands in the South seas sinking underneath the depths of the ocean, while the waters closed over the people of whole towns and villages—all bear witness to the resistless, merciless, relentless exhibition of power which a full-fledged earthquake displays when once it gets a-going.

Earthquakes have always attracted the attention of scientists. Pliny, it will be remembered, watched the eruption of Vesuvius when that mountain buried Pompeii beneath its cinders and lava flows during a great disturbance of the earth. In latter days instruments have been constructed which give some idea of the nature of the shock. They even record and differentiate the different impulses of motion of the earth during the disturbance. But no really satisfactory conclusion as to the cause of earthquakes has been arrived at by men of science, as the whole matter is intricately connected with the physical structure of the earth, the facts of which are really unknown, although a great deal of theoretical discussion on the subject has engaged the attention of eminent scientists.

No violent and destructive shocks have disturbed the tranquility of this section since the early part of the century, when the region about Cape Girardeau, Mo., was agitated. That, indeed, was a transformation of the face of nature. Hills were fashioned where hollows had been before, and great areas of country were depressed below the normal level. The swamps and lagoons of the Southeast Missouri district were almost all formed by this convulsion of nature.

Yesterday's quake should bring no alarm to the minds of the people. The general habit and custom of earthquakes seems to lead them to frequent mountainous countries near to the sea, and while an inland disturbance such as that of the Cape Girardeau district sometimes occurs, such cases are an exception to what appears to be the general rule.—K. C. Times, Nov. 1, 1895.

A Plain Falsehood.

It is disgraceful the way the Associated Press and the gold standard newspapers have league together to misrepresent the cause of free silver. Reports concerning the action of the recent meeting of the Farmer's National congress at Atlanta furnish a fair sample of the extent to which news-gathering concerns under the control of Wall street will go to try to make the public believe that the cause of free silver is losing ground. In the Associated Press report of the congress the following was sent broadcast over the country as the honest opinion of the delegates:

A sensation was sprung in the form of a fight on free silver, which resulted in the complete defeat of the 16 to 1 forces. By a vote of 251 to 104 the congress refused to insert the words "at a ratio not to exceed 16 to 1" in a resolution asking congress to use both gold and silver on a parity and calling for an international conference on the monetary question.

The editor of the St. Louis Journal of Agriculture was a delegate to the convention and a member of the committee on resolutions. He says that the committee submitted three resolutions on the silver question for consideration. Several amendments were offered and voted down, among others being the matter referred to by the Associated Press. This was done by common consent of the silver men to clear the way for another more definite resolution. The congress then took up this latter resolution and adopted it by practically a unanimous vote.

Resolved, that we favor the free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold at the present ratio of 16 to 1, guarded by an import duty upon foreign coin equal to the difference between the bullion value and coinage value of the metal at the date of importation, whenever the bullion value of the metal is less than its coin value.

Now what could be more distant from the truth than the report sent out by the Associated Press that the Farmer's National congress had declared against the free coinage of silver? The Atlanta Constitution and other southern papers have called attention to this lie, but not a single gold standard paper in the United States has corrected it. Knowing now that the Associated Press report was as false as could be, why is it that these papers remain silent? Let them answer if they dare. The Tribune can answer for them. They are afraid to let the people know the truth.

Fortunately, the entire press of this country is not under the control of Wall street and forced to dance when the Rothschild's in Europe fiddle, and the latter element will tell the truth regardless of consequences. If the cause of gold is so strong with the people, why is it that the Wall street newspaper organs resort to such desperate means to deceive the public? Their own actions contradict their words. They grasp at everything, fair and foul, to bolster up the cause of the New England hylocks. This kind of bushwhacking will not succeed in a country where the press is unmuzzled and so many people believe in fair dealing. The hired-men of the Rothschild's in this country and the corporations may lead around a few newspapers with rings in their noses and exhibit them like a fat steer at a country fair, but there are others that will neither be led nor driven; they will endeavor to tell the truth and serve the people, even if it is not so profitable at the present time.—J. C. Tribune.

Carlisle and Silver.

A correspondent writes to the Post-Dispatch asking if it is true that it was Secretary Carlisle who denounced as "a conspiracy" the legislation which almost simultaneously in Europe and America struck down silver as a money metal. It is true. Not only did Mr. Carlisle denounce it as a conspiracy, but he declared that "the consummation of such a scheme would ultimately entail more misery upon the human race than all the wars, pestilence and famine that ever occurred in the history of the world." In a speech delivered in the House of Representatives on Feb. 21, 1878, Mr. Carlisle said:

I shall not enter into an examination of the causes which have combined to depreciate the relative value of silver, and to appreciate the relative value of gold, since 1873, but I one of those who believe that they are transient and temporary in their nature, and that when they have passed away or have been removed by the separate or united actions of the nations most deeply interested in the subject, the old ratio of actual and relative value will be re-established on a firmer foundation than ever. I know that the world's stock of precious metals is none too large, and I see no reason to apprehend that it will ever become so. Mankind will be fortunate indeed, if the annual production of gold and silver coin shall keep pace with the annual increase of population, commerce and industry. According to my view of the subject, the conspiracy which seems to have been formed here and in Europe to destroy by legislation and otherwise from three-sevenths to one-half of the metallic money of the world is the most gigantic crime of this or any other age.

The consummation of such a scheme would ultimately entail more misery upon the human race than all the wars, pestilence and famine that ever occurred in the history of the world. The absolute and instantaneous destruction of half the entire movable property of the world, including horses, ships, railroads and all other appliances for carryage on commerce, while it would be felt more sensibly at the moment, would not produce anything like the prolonged distress and disorganization of society that must inevitably result from the permanent annihilation of one-half of the metallic money of the world.

No stronger denunciation of "the crime of 1873" was ever uttered. No more vivid picture of the consequences that would follow and that actually have followed it was ever drawn. The appeal is from Carlisle the officeholder to Carlisle the tribune of the people.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Ohio Mugwump Idea.

The Cleveland Chamber of Commerce puts forth a memorial address to the national committee of the two great parties, the Democrats and the Republicans:

"Whereas, the coming election involves the discussion of problems which affect the commercial, industrial, and financial affairs of the nation, and is likely to result in extreme partisan agitation which is calculated to unsettle the public mind and consequently create want of confidence in the restoration of business prosperity; and

"Whereas, the commerce of the country has not yet fully recovered from the effect of a commercial and financial depression caused largely by the agitation incident to the last Presidential campaign, and experience has shown that the trade interests of our country are forced into an unsettled condition by the attending excitement of a national political contest; such a condition is threatened by the campaign of 1896; and

"Whereas, there seem to be many reasons, from a commercial standpoint, which constitute a strong appeal for a change of policy in favor of a shorter campaign than has heretofore been customary; therefore, be it

"Resolved, By the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, that the time intervening between the Conventions of the two great parties and the election should be shortened to three instead of six months."

The idea will not escape any intelligent observer that, if there were no elections at all, the extreme partisan agitation which the Cleveland people deprecate would not occur, and then the reason for shortening the time of political discussion, preparatory to the choice of a new President and a new Congress, would not exist.

In other words, the Cleveland argument bears quite as strongly against the whole method of Republican government as it does against the method of conducting Presidential campaigns which has hitherto prevailed.

Would the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce be better pleased if we had a Caesar, with an obedient Senate at his heels, to rule absolutely over us?

BY THE USE OF

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

For fully two years, I suffered from rheumatism, and was frequently in such a condition that I could hardly walk. I spent some time in Hot Springs, Ark., and the treatment helped me for the time being, but soon the condition returned and I was as badly afflicted as ever. Ayer's Sarsaparilla being recommended, I resolved to try it, and after using six bottles, I was completely cured.—P. H. Ford, Quincy City, Ia.
